Course outline:

A computer hardware and network is a collection of interconnected computers and other devices which are able to communicate with each other and share hardware and software resources. Each of the past three centuries has been dominated by a single technology. Computer industry has made spectacular progress in short time. During the first two decades of their existence. Computer systems were highly centralized, usually within the single large room. A medium size company or university might have had one or two computers, while large institutions had at most few dozen. The idea that within 20 years equally powerful computers smaller than postage stamps would be mass-produced by the millions was pure science fiction.

Objectives:

After the course, the students will be able to:

- ✦ Define what a Computer Network
- ✦ List the benefits of networking
- ✦ List different wired and wireless media for communication
